LIU Global, 1 University Plaza, Brooklyn, NY 11201-5882

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 is a federal law that protects the privacy of student education records. When a student reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level, FERPA provides student confidentiality of information, such as grades, financial records and disciplinary action. Employees of Long Island University will not divulge information from a student record to any individual, including a parent, without written permission from the student. By signing this Waiver, the student indicates to whom he/she wants to release information and the type of information to be released. The completed Waiver will be kept on file at LIU Global headquarters in Brooklyn, New York and at the center where the student will be studying.
