

SCOTT ASTRADA

Scott Astrada has worked in financial services and banking policy for over 10 years. He is currently an Adjunct Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, DC. Scott has worked for the Center for Responsible Lending as the Director of Federal Advocacy and the U.S. Senate Democratic Policy and Communications Center under former Minority Leader Harry Reid as an Economic Policy Advisor. He also worked for the White House Office of Management and Budget, Office of General Counsel as Counsel & Political Appointee in the Administration of President Barack Obama.

Astrada completed legislative fellowships through the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute at UnidosUs (f/k/a National Council of La Raza), and the U.S. Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee. He has testified before both U.S. House & Senate Committees on financial technology policy, small dollar lending regulation, consumer financial protection law and policy, and retirement security. Scott has provided commentary for national media outlets such as the Financial Times, the Wall Street Journal, American Banker, CBS, Politico, the Atlantic, NPR, and on-camera breaking news interview.

Scott has also published academic and peer-reviewed articles on race, law & society, and political economy in journals such as the Harvard Latinx Law Review, The University of Pennsylvania Journal of Law & Social Change, University of Maryland Law Journal of Race, Religion, Gender & Class, and the Georgetown Public Policy Review. He has spoken at various events on financial services legislation & policy, and has been the recipient of over 5 educational scholarships, fellowships, and awards.

Scott received his BA from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, his JD and MBA from Marquette University and his LLM from the Georgetown University Law Center.