Hutton House Begins 44th Year in January 2019

Founded in 1975, Hutton House is entering its 44th winter session. Our lectures are known throughout the community for rich offerings that provide seasoned learners with new perspectives on the world around them. This winter, we continue to share our intellectual camaraderie as we participate in liberal arts courses designed for lifelong learners.

Our winter catalog will be available online and will be mailed to students’ homes shortly. We are delighted to welcome new lecturers, including former New York Times correspondent Lisa Pulitzer; USA Today travel journalist William J. McGee; CEO of the Theodore Roosevelt Association, Tweed Roosevelt; former Assemblyman Harvey Weisenberg; Consumer Reports’ Associate Communications Director Douglas Love; and former Congressman Steve Israel.

We are pleased to share some news about our upcoming lectures:

• American Classic: Sal St. George pays tribute to the late Burt Reynolds and his status as a No. 1 box office attraction.
• Understanding the Supreme Court: James Coll discusses how the Court deals with (or fails to deal with) controversial issues.
• Corot: The Painter and His Models: Dr. Carol Tabler will explore the French painter’s work during the early 19th century.

We are also offering lectures on the history of finance, autobiographical writing, and current events, including:

• When E. F. Hutton Talks: Four Wall Street executives and business professors share insight on the history of investing.
• I Have a Book in Me: News reporter and writer Lisa Pulitzer taps into the personal motivations for authoring an autobiography.
• Where Do We Go From Here?: Following the mid-term elections, Philosophy Professor Emeritus Dr. David Sprintzen will explore the outcomes, consequences and new directions.

We value your feedback. Our pledge to you is to serve the community by continually improving and expanding experiences for seasoned learners. Please email us at LIUSchoolofProfStudies@liu.edu if you have questions or suggestions.
From 1946 to 1965, financier W. E. Hutton II (pictured) and his wife Joan Chapin lived in what is now Hutton House Lectures and the School of Professional Accountancy. In 1965, the couple sold their estate to Long Island University for $400,000. The Hutton family's former patio is Room 100, a lecture hall for Hutton House and accountancy classes.
