Hutton House Highlights

CIVIL WAR MEMORABILIA
The Battle of Gettysburg was the largest military conflict in North American history when Union and Confederate forces collided at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. The epic battle lasted three days, from July 1 to July 3, 1863, and resulted in a retreat to Virginia by Robert E. Lee’s Army of Northern Virginia. In a recent class on The Battle of Gettysburg, lecturer Anthony Edward Major shared with Hutton House students a sword owned by General James Negley who commanded volunteers from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania to participate in the war. The sword was a gift from Negley’s men in 1864.

NEW SERIES COMING WINTER
WHEN E.F. HUTTON TALKS...
The brokerage firm E.F. Hutton engineered one of the most indelible advertising campaigns in television. E.F. Hutton’s commercials depicted people out for a jog, aboard a train, or at a dinner party. The conversation would inevitably turn to the stock market. And that’s when one person would say to the other, “My broker is E.F. Hutton. And E.F. Hutton says...” Once said, there would be a collective hush, among the eager eavesdroppers. The ad ends with the unforgettable tag line, “When E.F. Hutton talks, people listen.”

The Hutton House Lectures has assembled four former directors of Wall Street investment firms to take you through the history of Wall Street to modern day. This series, which will be offered on Mondays beginning January 21, 2019 should be required listening for everyone who is wondering about the stock market’s past and future.

The speakers are:
- Ed Weis, JD, Ph.D., Vice President of Academic Affairs, LIU Post
- Ray Pullaro, Dean, School of Business, LIU Brooklyn
- Chuck Garcia, Assistant Dean, School of Business, LIU Brooklyn
- Christopher Bates, Adjunct Professor of Finance, LIU Post

We value your feedback. Our pledge to you is to serve the community by continually improving and expanding experiences for seasoned learners. Please email us at LIUSchoolofProfStudies@liu.edu if you have questions or suggestions.
Our Heritage

In 1922, landscape architect Marian Cruger Coffin designed the gardens on the main campus for the previous estate owners Marjorie Merriweather Post and E.F. Hutton. In addition to creating a walled flower garden, a rose arbor, and a water garden, Ms. Coffin planted various trees which still exist today: Dogwoods, Cedar, Holly, Boxwoods, Standard Wisteria, Sophora, Japanese Maple (pictured) and Taxus. The Japanese maple outside Winnick House, home to the LIU Post College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, is a treasured specimen.

Class Notes